We followed up on all of our leads, but we could not find any trace of Suchada. We checked her bank accounts, her phone records, and her social media accounts. We even searched her house and her car. But she had vanished without a trace.

We continued to investigate the case for several months, but we were unable to find any evidence of what had happened to Suchada. The case remains unsolved.

The Case of the Murdered Monk

In 2015, a Buddhist monk named Phra was found murdered in his temple. The police were unable to solve the case, so the temple abbot hired the Asian Detective Agency to investigate.

We started our investigation by interviewing the monks who lived in the temple. We learned that Phra had been a strict disciplinarian and had recently been involved in a dispute with another monk. We also learned that Phra had been receiving threats from an unknown person.

We followed up on all of our leads, and we eventually identified a suspect. The suspect was a former monk who had been expelled from the temple for breaking the rules. We arrested the suspect and charged him with murder.

The suspect was convicted of murder and sentenced to life in prison. The case was finally solved, but it was a bittersweet victory. Phra was a good man who did not deserve to die.

The Case of the Stolen Buddha

We followed up on all of our leads, and we eventually identified the thieves. The thieves were a group of professional criminals who had stolen several other priceless artifacts in the past. We arrested the thieves and recovered the stolen Buddha statue.

The thieves were convicted of theft and sentenced to long prison terms. The Buddha statue was returned to the temple, where it is now kept under tight security.
